The McFaddin-Ward House Museum seeks quality people to become museum docents by attending its next Docent Training Program at the museum's visitor center, located at Calder Avenue and Third Street.

The program consists of eight classes and covers topics ranging from McFaddin family history to the mansion's architecture and decorative arts. Attendees will learn the mechanics of touring and gain interpretive skills for their tours. This rewarding program requires 32 hours of class work and outside study time. Because the Docent Training and materials are free, a commitment of up to ten hours a month for three years is expected from each participant. An easy commitment once you have met the wonderful women and men who are already docents.

Graduating docents are qualified to lead visitors on tours of the three-story mansion. In addition, graduates can volunteer in other museum capacities, such as work with school groups, assist in the museum collections department, and support special events. McFaddin-Ward volunteers can benefit from its on-going lectures series, historic conferences, and field trips, while participating in social events connected to the museum.

Please call Becky Fertitta, volunteer coordinator at the McFaddin-Ward House, for details, 832-1906, or email bfertitta@mcfaddin-ward.org.
